JUDICIAL SPEECHES

Sources of Judicial Speeches

From time to time the Editors publish summaries of judicial speeches. Judicial Speeches are a valuable source of expert legal commentary. A welcome development in this space is the collection of United Kingdom Judiciary Speeches on BAILII – the British and Irish Legal Information Institute – entitled United Kingdom Judiciary Speeches.

The Hon Susan Kiefel AC Chief Justice of Australia, “A nudge in the right direction; some landmark cases and the development of the law”, Hal Wootten Lecture 2022, University of New South Wales, Thursday 24 November 2022

The Hal Wootten Lecture is given in honour of John Halden Wootten AC QC: a solicitor; a barrister; a Queen’s Counsel; foundation President of the Aboriginal Legal Service; a Judge of the Supreme Court of New South Wales; Chairman of the New South Wales Law Reform Commission. He was also founder of the University of New South Wales’ Faculty of Law, of which he was Foundation Chair and Dean.

Her Honour attributes the “little nudge” philosophy to Hal Wootten. “He said that every person has opportunities to give the world a “little nudge” in the right direction. Her Honour illustrates that philosophy through an examination of two landmark decisions: Donoghue v Stevenson and Mabo v Queensland (No 2). Her Honour’s central argument is that, while they were “undoubtedly significant decisions”, “earlier cases and events provided more than a ‘little nudge’ in the right direction.”

The Rt Hon Lady Rose of Colmworth DBE, When Government sets prices: what can history teach us?, 23rd Burrell Lecture, The Competition Law Association, The Hon Society of Gray’s Inn, London 28 November 2022.

In this speech, her Honour asks the question “does government price setting work?”. Her Honour commences with a consideration of the history of price fixing in a UK and EU context. The prohibition against price fixing and the “theory of harm” of price fixing is at the core of the most systems of competition regulation. As her Honour explains, “the idea that underpins this theory of harm is that if prices are fixed, they will be higher than they would be under conditions of free competition.” However, government price fixing has been implemented at various stages and in various forms for centuries. The justification for this intervention being that in certain situations such as when the country is on a war footing, “the free movement of prices can result in very bad outcomes.” Whether this is ever sufficient justification is a source of debate among economists.

Her Honour provides an interesting commentary on the effect of government efforts to intervene in prices. As she concludes whether the “old public interest benefits which were relied on during the War” resurface in the modern context remains to be seen.

Sir Julian Flaux: Chancellor of the High Court, “Is commercial litigation going green? Environmental and green washing claims and how they will shape the law”, 2022 Combar Lecture, 16 November 2022

There is no doubt that there has been an increase in climate litigation globally. According to the LSE, the number of climate change related cases has more than doubled since 2015. The cases have been brought against governments and also against some corporate entities. There are cases “seeking to enforce climate standards or a small number using arguments based on so called “greenwashing” or based on personal responsibility or “failure to adapt”. In this speech, Sir Julian examines the arguments in those cases in more detail.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW – WHETHER THE CHIEF HEALTH OFFICER HAD AN OBLIGATION TO GIVE REASONS FOR DIRECTIONS MADE UNDER THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT 2005 – WHETHER DECISIONS MADE BY THE CHIEF HEALTH OFFICER UNDERPINNING THE DIRECTIONS WERE OF A LEGISLATIVE RATHER THAN AN ADMINISTRATIVE CHARACTER – PUBLIC HEALTH ACT 2005 S 362B

Hunt v Dr John Gerrard, Chief Health Officer [2022] QCA 263 ★

In this significant case, the court considered the nature of the Chief Health Officer's power to make public health directions under s 362B Public Health Act 2005 – specifically whether such decisions were, for the purposes of the Judicial Review Act 1991, decisions of a legislative character (for which reasons could not be sought under s 32) or of an administrative character. In the court's view (Davis J dissenting), properly characterized, they were decisions of a legislative character. The appeals were dismissed.

Morrison, Flanagan JJA and Davis J

16 December 2022

The appeal concerned five public health directions which the Chief Health Officer had given pursuant to s 362B Public Health Act 2005 which empowers the Chief Health Officer to “give a direction ... to assist in containing, or to respond to, the spread of Covid-19 within the community”. [2]. At first instance, Justice Dalton held that the decisions to give the directions were of a legislative character and as such the appellants were unable to obtain a statement of reasons in relation to each. [3].

Did the decisions of the CHO to give the five public health directions determine the content of the law as a rule of conduct or were the decisions the application of a general legislative provision to particular cases?

The courts have consistently recognised that distinguishing between administrative and legislative acts is a complex task which depends on context: see for example Ishiyama v Dr Peter Aitken, Former Chief Health Officer [2022] QSC 41 [23], fn 4 and Kassam v Hazzard (2021) 106 NSWLR 520; [2021] NSWCA 299 [153].

At first instance, Justice Dalton identified and quoted the relevant test contained in Commonwealth v Grunseit (1943) 67 CLR 58; [1943] HCA 47, ultimately reasoning that the CHO's decisions to issue the public health directions were not of an administrative character. The appellants submitted that her Honour had erred, however, by applying a different test. [42]. The court did not accept that, noting that her Honour's analysis was compatible with the test stated in Grunseit. [44].

The appellants alternatively argued that her Honour misapplied the test in determining that the directions were not of an administrative character. [42]. Specifically, they submitted that she erred in holding that “section 362B does not in substance or in fact provide the content of rules of law”, and in holding that the CHO “could not in substance be said to simply have applied legislative provisions of that Act or to have executed provisions of that Act”. They argued that the relevant directions amounted to no more than an execution of the general rule of conduct enacted by Parliament in s 362B. [45]. Finally, they contended that the phrase “reasonably believes it is necessary” contained in s 362B “is an administrative decision-making formulation that is seen across the cases”. [60].

The plurality observed as follows:

1. Each direction created new rules of conduct which imposed restrictions and significant obligations on a wide range of persons and applied prospectively. [55];
2. The obligations imposed by the directions went well beyond “gap filling” undertaken to enable the executive to apply the rules. [56];

3. Whilst the wording and operation of s 326B are directly relevant in determining whether the directions given pursuant to the section determine the content of a law as a rule of conduct, so is the scope of the power which it confers on the CHO. [62];
4. The breadth of the jurisdictional fact is only one matter to be weighed along with other indicia, in determining the character of the decisions: see Kassam v Hazzard (2021) 106 NSWLR 520; [2021] NSWCA 299, [157]–[161].

The court held by majority that the decisions of the CHO to give the directions determined the content of the law as a rule of conduct and did not constitute the application of a general legislative provision to particular cases. [65].

Did the preponderance of other factors indicate whether the decisions to give the directions were of a legislative rather than an administrative character?

In her judgment, Justice Dalton identified a series of ten factors which may indicate whether a decision is of a legislative rather than an administrative character [66] – see Schwennesen v Minister for Environment and Resource Management [2010] QCA 340 and Sea Shepherd Australia Ltd v Western Australia (2014) 313 ALR 184; [2014] WASC 66. The appellants contended that her Honour misapplied the factors and erred in the weight which she gave each. After exhaustively reviewing the judgment [68]–[82], the plurality was not satisfied that any error was revealed. [67].

Does s 362B Public Health Act 2005 confer powers on the CHO of a legislative nature?

At first instance, in rejecting the appellants’ submission that the directions were of an administrative character, Justice Dalton observed that legislation may permit members of the executive to legislate [84], and further that Ch 8, Pt 7A provides the power for the CHO to make directions as a singular power, which can be differentiated from the other executive powers provided by Ch 8 as well as other powers exercised by the CHO. [85].

The appellants sought to argue that by reasoning in that way and demarcating the CHO’s power as a singular power of a legislative kind, her Honour had erred in her interpretation of the statute. [86]. The court did not agree that any error was apparent. [87].

In determining whether the decisions were of an administrative character, should the Court have regard to the remedial nature of the JRA?

The appellants contended that Justice Dalton had erred in failing to have regard to the remedial nature of Judicial Review Act 1991. The court noted that was incorrect as her Honour had considered the issue. [88]. It was also argued that having regard to the Act’s remedial nature, the proper approach to classification of a particular decision should have been made having regard to whether it affects the rights, interests, liberties or legitimate expectations of any person as opposed to solely by reference to set criteria or indicia. [89].

The court was not satisfied that her Honour’s approach was wanting. Rather, in its assessment the approach adopted by her Honour was:

“orthodox and in keeping with authority. It was by a consideration of the test in Grunseit and of other indicia that her Honour determined that the CHO’s decisions to give the directions were not of an administrative character, but were legislative. Once that determination was made, the remedial nature of the JRA ... does not justify treating a decision as being of an administrative character if analysis of the decision demonstrates that its administrative characteristics are displaced by its legislative characteristics.” [89].

Dissenting opinion

Justice Davis came to a different view in respect to several issues. In particular, and having regard to the explanatory notes, his view was that the relevant directions did not determine the content of the law as a rule of conduct but instead implemented the laws of Parliament. [137]. In Justice Davis' opinion, s 362B shows all the hallmarks of a grant of administrative power, including:

1. the power is only exercisable upon establishment of a jurisdictional fact;
2. the jurisdictional fact requires that a particular subjective state of mind be held by the decision-maker;
3. the power does not arise unless that state of mind is held reasonably;
4. the exercise of the power is limited by subject matter, purpose and time. [149].

Disposition

The appeals were dismissed.

CONTEMPT – WHERE THE APPELLANT WAS FOUND IN CONTEMPT FOR PUBLISHING STATEMENTS ABOUT THE RESPONDENT WHILST RESTRAINED – WHERE THE APPELLANT CONTENDED THE RELEVANT ORDERS WERE NOT IN EFFECT OR ELSE HAD NOT BEEN MADE AT THE TIME OF THE PUBLICATIONS – WHETHER THE ORDERS WERE SUFFICIENTLY CLEAR THAT BREACHES COULD BE FOUND TO BE CONTEMPTUOUS

Leigh v Bruder Expedition Pty Ltd [2022] QCA 267 ★

This appeal considered the formal pronouncement and effectiveness of orders for the purposes of rr 660 and 661 Uniform Civil Procedure Rules 1999. On 1 November 2019, at the conclusion of a trial in the District Court, orders were made prohibiting the appellant from publishing certain statements about the respondent or its business. After being found in contempt of those orders, the appellant sought leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal. On appeal the appellant argued that the relevant orders were not enforceable at the time of her alleged contempt, and that in any event, that no order had been formally pronounced at the conclusion of the trial. Dalton JA (Bowskill CJ and Morrison JA agreeing) granted leave to appeal but dismissed the substantive appeal, on grounds that orders had been pronounced on and were enforceable from 1 November 2019.

Bowskill CJ and Morrison and Dalton JJA

20 December 2022

Background

The respondent caravan manufacturer sued the appellant for the tort of injurious falsehood in respect of statements the appellant made on Facebook about the respondent's products and business. [4], [5]. On 1 November 2019, following a two-week jury trial, the respondent succeeded in part and was awarded $357,000.00 in damages. [4], [6], [32]. After the jury delivered its verdict, counsel and the trial judge discussed the terms of an injunction prohibiting the appellant from publishing further statements. [6]–[9]. A draft of the orders was initialled by the Judge that evening, after adjournment. [4], [9]–[10].

On 3 November 2019, the appellant once again published statements about the respondent's products and business on Facebook. [4]. The following day, the respondent filed an application seeking that the appellant be punished for contempt. [5]. The application proceeded and was argued on the basis of whether a contempt was proved. [20]. On 12 December 2019, the primary judge found the contempt was proved, and ordered that the appellant perform community service. [21]. The appellant sought leave to appeal against the finding pursuant to s 118 District Court of Queensland Act 1967. [3].

The appellant's application for leave to appeal was heard together with her substantive appeal. [3]. Before the Court of Appeal, the appellant argued inter alia that because the orders made on 1 November 2019 were not filed until 12 November 2019, r 661(4) Uniform Civil Procedure Rules 1999 ("UCPR") provided that the order was not enforceable when the contempt application was filed on 4 November 2019. [44]. The appellant contended further that, in any event, there was no order made on 1 November 2019, because the order was not pronounced in Court in accordance with r 660(1)(a) of the UCPR. [45].

Whether the orders were pronounced

Dalton JA considered that the argument that no order had been made on 1 November 2019 must fail both because the appellant had not argued that ground before the primary judge, and because an order was in fact pronounced for the purposes of r 660(1)(a) of the UCPR on 1 November 2019. [45], [59]. The authorities supported that the need for a formal pronouncement of orders in the sense of a careful and particular form of wording is problematic and unreal in the day-to-day work of the courts. [64].

In this case the transcript showed that the Judge and counsel had been at pains to agree upon the precise wording of the orders to be made. [67]. Dalton JA considered it significant that the Judge had expressed a desire to have the order sent through so it could be signed and placed with the file that afternoon. [69]. That wording was reflective of r 661 of the UCPR, which refers to the recording, rather than the making, of an order. [69].

In her Honour's view, the clear intention from the detailed discussion that took place in court and the Judge's concern that the document recording the orders be signed and placed with the file revealed that, despite the lack of formal language used, an order was made on 1 November 2019. [70].

When the orders became effective

Dalton JA considered that there was nothing in the argument that the orders were not effective at the time of the relevant contempt. [44]. Her Honour reiterated in that respect that the historic distinction between pronouncing an order and its recording is preserved in r 660(1)(a) and r 661 of the UCPR. [61]. The effect of an order which is pronounced but not filed, is as described in Harrison v Harrison [1955] Ch 260; relevantly that the order is provisionally effective and can be treated as effective where the justice of the case requires it, such as where an injunction has been granted. [62].

Disposition

In the result, Bowskill CJ and Morrison agreeing, and because the appeal raised points of general importance, the Court granted leave to appeal, but dismissed the appeal with costs. [1]–[3].

CRIMINAL LAW – APPEAL AGAINST SENTENCE – WHERE THE APPLICANT PLEADED GUILTY TO THREE COUNTS OF INCEST – WHERE THE APPLICANT WAS SENTENCED TO TWO AND A HALF YEARS' IMPRISONMENT ON EACH COUNT, TO BE SERVED CONCURRENTLY WITH EACH OTHER BUT CUMULATIVELY UPON SENTENCES PREVIOUSLY IMPOSED FOR OFFENDING AGAINST THE SAME COMPLAINANT – WHERE 477 DAYS PRESENTENCE CUSTODY WAS NOT DECLARED AS TIME ALREADY SERVED AS CONTEMPLATED BY S 159A PENALTIES AND SENTENCES ACT 1992 – WHERE THE SENTENCING JUDGE FAILED TO CONSIDER WHETHER TO DECLARE SOME PART OF THE PRESENTENCE CUSTODY OF 477 DAYS AS TIME SERVED – WHERE THERE WAS AN ERROR OF PRINCIPLE THAT REQUIRED THE APPLICANT TO BE RESENTENCED

R v DAB* [2022] QCA 268 ★

The applicant sought leave to appeal his sentence following pleas of guilty to three counts of incest. The applicant argued (1) the sentencing judge erred by failing to declare his presentence custody as time served, and (2) the sentencing judge erred by failing to make a statement subject to s 159A(3B) Penalties and Sentences Act 1992 that such time was not declared. The Court of Appeal allowed the first ground of appeal and dismissed the second. The Court of Appeal found the sentencing judge had erred in finding he could not declare the presentence custody because he was imposing a cumulative sentence. Such a declaration remains discretionary unless the imposition of a cumulative sentence is mandatory. The Court of Appeal resentenced the applicant to a head sentence of seven years and, in its discretion, refused to declare the presentence custody as time served.

Mullins P, Dalton JA and North J

23 December 2022

Background

The applicant pleaded guilty to three counts of incest against his biological daughter, aged 14-years. [4], [10]. He was sentenced to two years and six months imprisonment on each count. [4]. Those sentences were to be served concurrently on each other. [4], [11]. However, the sentences were to be served cumulatively on sentences earlier imposed for other sexual offending (including rape) against the same complainant, that occurred during the same period but were not disclosed until later. [4], [11]. For those other offences, the appellant was sentenced to a head sentence of five years imprisonment, with 604 days presentence custody declared as time served and immediate parole eligibility. [11]. The total effective head sentence was therefore seven years and six months. [14].

The applicant sought to appeal the sentence on the following grounds: first, that the sentence was manifestly excessive because the sentencing judge failed to declare the 477 days presentence custody; and second, the sentencing judge erred by failing to make a statement about the presentence custody not to be declared subject to s 159A(3B) Penalties and Sentences Act 1992. [5].

Decision of the Court of Appeal

The Court of Appeal allowed the appeal on ground one, dismissing ground 2. [2], [6].

The sentencing judge erred in finding the 477 days in custody could not be declared time served due to the cumulative sentence he was imposing, citing Braeckmans [2022] QCA 25 ('Braeckmans'). [15]. The court in Braeckmans found s 156A requires the court to refuse to declare presentence custody as time served where this would render a cumulative sentence of imprisonment partly concurrent. [16]. However, s 156A did not apply as, although the offences were listed in Sch 1, these had not been committed whilst on parole or any other circumstances listed in s 156A. [17].

The Court of Appeal rejected the submission that presentence custody cannot be declared as time served under s 159A wherever the sentences are cumulative, including under s 156. [18]. Importantly, s 156A imposes a mandatory cumulative sentence, such that a declaration under s 159A would effectively reduce its cumulative effect; whereas s 156 provides the Court with a discretion to impose a cumulative sentence. [18]. Thus, there are clear policy reasons for not making a declaration of presentence custody as time served where a mandatory cumulative sentence is imposed under s 156A, but not so where a sentence is imposed on a discretionary basis under s 156. [18].

In the present case, no mandatory cumulative sentence was applicable. [19]. Consequently, the sentencing judge's error in failing to consider whether to declare the 477 days presentence custody as time served required the Court of Appeal to resentence the applicant. [19]. The Court noted the difficulty of speaking of a "normal range" of sentencing for incest cases, as the circumstances of such cases are diverse. [22].

The Court of Appeal varied the sentence imposed by substituting the term of 2 years and 6 months for "2 years" in respect of each count, reflecting the fact the applicant had served more than one-third of any total sentence of the offending by the date of the second sentence [2], [25]. The effective head sentence was seven years. [25].

The Court ultimately refused to declare the 643 days presentence custody as time served. [2]. The presentence custody also formed part of the sentences imposed in respect of the other incest offending and, in light of the seriousness of the offending, cumulative sentences which did not declare time served were appropriate. [23]–[26].

In respect of ground 2, the Court of Appeal considered that while the requirements of s 159A(3B) are mandatory, if a judge failed to state the dates and calculations of presentence custody but nevertheless stated the time declared to be served, the omission to comply with ss 159A(3B)(a) and (b) would not constitute an error compelling the Court to resentence. [7]. The Court of Appeal dismissed that ground. [6].

CRIMINAL LAW – IMPROPER ADMISSION OR REJECTION OF EVIDENCE – WHERE THE APPELLANT WAS CONVICTED OF ONE OFFENCE OF STRANGULATION IN A DOMESTIC SETTING (COUNT 1) – WHERE THE APPELLANT WAS ACQUITTED OF ONE OFFENCE OF SUFFOCATION IN A DOMESTIC SETTING (COUNT 2) AND ONE OFFENCE OF ASSAULT OCCASIONING BODILY HARM WHILE ARMED (COUNT 3) – WHERE IN A PRE-TRIAL RULING, ANOTHER JUDGE ADMITTED EVIDENCE OF PRIOR ACTS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE BY THE APPELLANT AGAINST THE COMPLAINANT – WHETHER S 132B EVIDENCE ACT 1977 DISPLACES THE OPERATION OF THE COMMON LAW RULE OF ADMISSIBILITY FOR SIMILAR FACT EVIDENCE – EVIDENCE ACT 1977 S 132B

R v KBB [2022] QCA 273 ★

The appellant raised two grounds of appeal against his conviction of strangulation (a domestic violence offence). Only the second ground is the subject of this note. The appellant argued the pre-trial ruling to admit evidence of past domestic violence acts by him against the complainant was erroneous at law. The Court of Appeal dismissed that ground, finding the pre-trial judge had not erred. As the High Court made clear in Roach v The Queen, the rule in Pfennig does not apply to evidence deemed relevant under ss 130 and 132B Evidence Act 1977. Such relevant evidence will only be inadmissible pursuant to common law exceptions, such as the unfairness discretion of s 130. The evidence need not also satisfy the common law test for propensity evidence.

McMurdo and Flanagan JJA and Freeburn J

23 December 2022

Background

The appellant was convicted by a jury of strangulation in a domestic setting of his then partner ('the complainant'). [1]. He was acquitted of two other domestic violence offences. [1].

The appellant and complainant had argued, with the appellant demanding access to her phone and alleging she had been unfaithful to him. [4]–[5]. The complainant slapped the appellant's face. [6]. He responded by grabbing the complainant by the throat and hair, putting her in a headlock such that she couldn't breathe. [6]. The appellant threw her onto the bed and covered her mouth and nose with his hand. [7]. The appellant desisted, but the argument continued as the complainant tried to leave. [8]. He again grabbed her throat and threw his drink in her face before hitting her on the head with the glass – causing her to become unconscious. [8]. When she awoke, she called her mother, who assisted her to leave. [8], [16].

Amongst his grounds of appeal, the appellant argued a pre-trial ruling to admit evidence of prior domestic violence by the appellant was erroneous. [2], [28]. The pre-trial judge had considered the evidence relevant to the appellant's propensity to commit domestic violence in the relationship, including choking and demanding to see the complainant's phone. [30]. The evidence was therefore admitted pursuant to s 132B Evidence Act 1977. [31]. That provision sets out that, in respect of prescribed offences:

“Relevant evidence of the history of the domestic relationship between the defendant and the person against whom the offence was committed is admissible in evidence in the proceeding.”

Consequently, the evidence of prior domestic violence was led during the trial. The complainant gave evidence of four uncharged acts of domestic violence which occurred around 6 months prior. [10]. In the first incident, the complainant alleged he had bitten her shoulder, punched her jaw and later strangled her after she refused his demands to inspect her phone. [10].

The second incident, some weeks later, consisted of the appellant accusing the complainant of sleeping with another man and demanding to see her phone. [11]. The complainant complied, but the appellant accused her of deleting material from her phone, which he smashed, and threw a plate at her face. [11].

During the third incident, the appellant smashed the complainant's phone while intoxicated and they later fought after he showed her a video of himself having sex with another woman. [12]. The appellant strangled the complainant when she became angry at the footage. [12].

Finally, during the fourth incident, the appellant accused the complainant of being pregnant to someone else before throwing a sandwich at her and strangling her. [13].

The appellant argues the admission of that evidence was erroneous.

Decision of the Court of Appeal

The Court of Appeal dismissed the appeal against conviction. [39]–[41].

The Court referred to Roach v The Queen (2011) 242 CLR 610, in which the High Court held “the rule in Pfennig v the Queen could not be imported into ss 130 and 132B, and that the rule had no application to evidence which satisfied the test of relevance.” [33]. The evidence of prior domestic violence may be relevant for a myriad of other reasons, such as the accused's state of mind, evaluation of the complainant's evidence, or possible defences. [33].

The Court of Appeal emphasised Roach is “binding authority for the displacement of” the common law rule of admissibility by ss 130 and 132B. [36]. The Court of Appeal explained:

“the common law rule which determines the admissibility of similar fact evidence is one which, subject to certain exceptions, requires the exclusion of evidence not because it is irrelevant, but because it is likely to be unfairly prejudicial to the accused, or in other words, that it is likely to be misused by a jury.” [36].

Once the evidence is found to be relevant, it is admissible (per s 132B), unless the discretion should be exercised to exclude it on the ground of unfairness per s 130. [36]. Ordinarily, the question of unfairness is resolved by reference to the common law – that is, whether the potential prejudice outweighed the probative value of the evidence. [36].

Here, as there was no argument for the exclusion of evidence under s 130, the pre-trial judge's ruling was not in error. [37]. Similarly, there was no argument on appeal that counsel having not sought exclusion of the evidence under s 130 and the subsequent admission of the evidence resulted in a miscarriage of justice. [37].

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW – JUDICIAL REVIEW – WHERE THE PRISONER APPLIED FOR A STATUTORY ORDER OF REVIEW – WHETHER THE PRISONER COULD IDENTIFY A REVIEWABLE ERROR IN RELATION TO THE MAKING OF A DECISION – WHETHER THE DECISION-MAKER MADE A DECISION WHICH WAS NOT AUTHORISED BY THE ENACTMENT – WHETHER THE DECISION-MAKER FAILED TO TAKE INTO ACCOUNT A RELEVANT CONSIDERATION – CORRECTIVE SERVICES ACT 2006 S 193

Morgan v Parole Board of Queensland* [2022] QSC 280 ★

In this case the administrative decision-maker, the Parole Board of Queensland, made a number of purported decisions in relation to a prisoner's application for a parole order (the "application"). Justice Ryan discussed the text and context of the Corrective Services Act 2006 as it relates to the process for determining such applications. The prisoner had identified a number of grounds of review in relation to how the Parole Board of Queensland had handled his application, however, her Honour only considered that one of these grounds had merit having been satisfied that the Parole Board of Queensland failed to take into account a relevant consideration when making a decision to ultimately refuse the application. The decision to refuse the application was set aside and the Parole Board of Queensland was directed to remake the decision according to law.

9 December 2022

Background

EWM (the "applicant"), who is serving a life sentence, applied to the Parole Board of Queensland (the "respondent") for a parole order (the "application"). [11]. The applicant was informed by letter that the respondent had "approved" his release on parole but conditional upon a "suitable accommodation risk assessment". [17]–[22]. The respondent then purported to make other related decisions about the applicant's "release on parole" to specified addresses which were considered to be suitable. [23]–[24]; [28]–[39]; [44]–[46]. The respondent had also decided to add a further purported condition to the applicant's "release on parole" which was the receipt of further information from a psychologist about an "individual intervention program". [41]–[42]. The applicant was then told that it was the preliminary view of the respondent that his application would be refused (despite previous indications) and provided the applicant an opportunity to respond. [47]. The respondent later refused the application and provided a "statement of reasons" (the "refusal decision"). [48].

Whether the applicant could identify a reviewable error in the making of a decision

One of the grounds of review was that the respondent had made a decision to grant the applicant "parole" and it had no power to "revoke" that decision under the Corrective Services Act 2006. [49]. Justice Ryan considered that this argument proceeded on a misconceived premise. [52]–[55]. The respondent can only grant, refuse or defer an application for a parole order. [4]–[5]. A parole order had never been granted, which meant that this ground of review failed. [55]. The alternative "grounds of review" were focused on the refusal decision. [56]. These grounds of review were narrowed in the course of argument to whether the respondent failed to take into account relevant considerations. [56]–[59]. Justice Ryan considered that this ground had merit, but only to the extent that the respondent had incorrectly proceeded on the basis that the applicant had not participated in any substance abuse program. [60]–[69]. Justice Ryan concluded that in circumstances where the respondent considered there was a direct link between substance abuse and the index offence – which was said to justify further treatment in a custodial setting – whether the applicant had completed a substance abuse intervention program was a “matter of central relevance and importance to its decision.” [70]–[94]. To the extent that the respondent had not taken this into account it was a reviewable error. [95].

Disposition

In the result, the refusal decision was set aside, and it was directed that the decision be remade according to law. [95]. The application was otherwise dismissed. [95]. The parties are to be heard on costs and the appropriate form of order. [97].

JUDICIAL REVIEW – WHERE THE APPLICANT MADE COMPLAINTS TO THE HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSIONER INCLUDING UNDER THE ANTI-DISCRIMINATION ACT 1991 – WHERE THE COMMISSIONER DETERMINED NOT TO ACCEPT THE COMPLAINT – WHETHER S 136 ANTI-DISCRIMINATION ACT 1991 EMPOWERED THE COMMISSIONER NOT TO ACCEPT A COMPLAINT – ANTI-DISCRIMINATION ACT S 136

Sandy v Queensland Human Rights Commissioner [\[2022\] QSC 277](#) ★

This case considered whether s 136 Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 empowers the Queensland Human Rights Commissioner not to accept a complaint. The applicant was an Aboriginal man diagnosed with gastric cancer whilst in prison, whose application for exceptional circumstances parole was refused. He subsequently lodged related complaints under the Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (“AD Act”) and the Human Rights Act 2019 with the respondent Human Rights Commissioner. After the Commissioner purportedly decided not to accept the complaint under s 136 of the AD Act, the applicant sought judicial review. Williams J found that s 136 of the AD Act specifies the formal or jurisdictional requirements for a complaint under the AD Act but does not empower the Commissioner not to accept a complaint.

Williams J

9 December 2022

Background

The applicant, an Aboriginal man, was diagnosed with gastric cancer whilst in prison. [2]. He applied for exceptional circumstances parole to allow him to receive culturally appropriate health care in the community, but the Parole Board refused his application. [2]–[4]. He later lodged related complaints under the Anti-Discrimination Act 1991 (“AD Act”) and the Human Rights Act 2019 (“HR Act”) with the respondent Human Rights Commissioner (“Commissioner”). [1], [4].

Initially, the Commissioner’s delegate refused to accept either complaint. [6]. However, following an internal review, the Commissioner decided to accept the complaint under the HR Act, but not to accept the complaint under the AD Act. [6]. The decision not to accept the latter complaint was expressed as having been made under s 136 of the AD Act, apparently on grounds that the complaint did not set out reasonably sufficient details to indicate an alleged contravention of the Act. [6], [9]–[16].

The applicant in turn sought judicial review of the Commissioner’s decision under s 20 of the Judicial Review Act 1991 (“JR Act”). [7]. Relevantly for present purposes, ground 5 of the application alleged that the decision involved an error of law, in that it applied an incorrect interpretation of provisions of the AD Act including s 136. [7]. Ground 4 of the application alleged that the Commissioner’s decision was unlawful for the purposes of s 58 of the HR Act. [7].

Ground 5: s 136 of the AD Act

After considering s 136 of the AD Act in accordance with the accepted principles of statutory construction, Williams J explained that the section identifies the formal or jurisdictional requirements of a complaint but does not identify any power in the Commissioner with respect to a complaint. [70]. While it would therefore be open to the Commissioner to apply for a declaration that a complaint did not comply with the jurisdictional requirements of s 136, the provision itself did not provide a basis for the Commissioner not to accept a complaint. [75].

In the instant case the Commissioner appeared to have evaluated the complaint to determine whether there was an irredeemable defect in the chain or reasoning or logic in the complaint. [84]. The power to undertake that exercise lies in s 139 of the AD Act, not s 136. [84]. Whilst a decision under s 139 of the AD Act is one to which the JR Act applies, the same could not be said for a decision purportedly made under s 136 of the Act. [86]–[87]. That was not a decision made or required to be made under an enactment. [87]. Accordingly, the Commissioner's decision was not reviewable under the JR Act. [87].

Ground 4: s 58 of the HR Act

The finding that the JR Act did not apply to permit a review of the decision not to accept the complaint under the AD Act did not affect the validity of the application for relief under the HR Act, notwithstanding that s 59 of the HR Act does not permit an application in its own right. [93]–[98]. In theory, s 59(2) of the HR Act permitted that ground of the application to continue despite the finding that the JR Act did not apply. [99]–[100]. However, her Honour considered that there was no utility in considering the ground where the decision of the Commissioner was beyond power. [101]–[110].

Disposition

As declaratory relief and an order setting aside the Commissioner's decision had not been addressed by the parties, her Honour determined to hear from the parties before making final orders. [89], [111].

PROCEDURE – COSTS – WHERE JUDGMENT WAS GIVEN LARGELY IN FAVOUR OF THE AUSTRALIAN FINANCIAL COMPLAINTS AUTHORITY ("AFCA") – WHETHER THE HARDIMAN PRINCIPLE PRECLUDES AFCA FROM BEING AWARDED COSTS – WHETHER ANOTHER PARTY SHOULD BE PRECLUDED FROM RECEIVING COSTS ON THE BASIS THAT IT WAS NOT NECESSARY FOR IT TO HAVE BEEN SEPARATELY REPRESENTED

ISG Financial Services Ltd v Australian Financial Complaints Authority Ltd; ANLP Pty Ltd att AP Superannuation Fund v ISG Financial Services Ltd (No 2)* [2022] QSC 281 ★

This case considered two noteworthy issues concerning costs. The first issue was whether the Australian Financial Complaints Authority should not receive its costs of proceedings on the basis of the Hardiman principle. Justice Dalton declined to apply that principle to litigation involving AFCA. The second issue was whether another party should not receive its costs because there was no need for it to have been separately represented. Dalton J concluded that it should not.

Dalton J

15 December 2022

Background

The Australian Financial Complaints Authority ("AFCA") made six determinations against a financial services company, the plaintiff, following complaints by various persons. [15]. One of those persons, the second defendant, commenced proceedings in the District Court seeking to enforce the AFCA determination in its favour (for the payment of monies). [29]. Separately, the plaintiff commenced a proceeding in the Supreme Court seeking declarations that it need not comply with the AFCA determinations. [15]. Those proceedings were subsequently consolidated. [30].

After a trial before Dalton J, the plaintiff was “almost entirely unsuccessful”, with AFCA and the second defendant instead succeeding on their counter-claims to enforce the determinations. [15]. This judgment concerns costs following that judgment. [1].

Whether AFCA should be awarded its costs

Despite the usual rule that costs follow the event, the plaintiff contended that it should not pay AFCA’s costs on the basis of the Hardiman principle (articulated in R v Australian Broadcasting Tribunal; ex parte Hardiman (1980) 144 CLR 13). [3]. The plaintiff contended that the Court should apply the reasoning of Colvin J (of the Federal Court) in MetLife Insurance Ltd v Australian Financial Complaints Authority (No 3) [2022] FCA 849, in which his Honour said that the Hardiman principle should be applied in proceedings involving AFCA.

The Hardiman principle, which is routinely applied in the case of proceedings involving “judicial officers of inferior courts, and Magistrates, and in the case of statutory tribunals”, is that such entities should generally not play an active role in litigation, instead merely submitting to “such order as the court may make”. [4]. On that basis, in MetLife (No 3), Colvin J considered that AFCA should not receive its costs, despite its success following a challenge to its determinations. [3].

However, Dalton J declined to apply the Hardiman principle as Colvin J did in MetLife (No 3). [14]. Her Honour noted that, unlike the cases in which that principle is normally applied, AFCA is a “private body, albeit that it operates a scheme approved by the relevant Federal Minister” to resolve complaints about financial services entities. [5]. There was no compulsion for the plaintiff to undertake such a business, and thereby be subject to the AFCA scheme. [8]. Accordingly, her Honour said that she doubted Colvin J’s reasoning, to the effect that it was “inaccurate to describe the [AFCA] scheme as being voluntary in any meaningful sense”. [8]. Her Honour also considered that AFCA’s statutory obligation “to take reasonable steps to ensure compliance with its determinations” was “another indication” that it is not bound by the Hardiman principle. [9].

Justice Dalton also considered that “the purpose of the legislative scheme” (which was a consumer-oriented one) would be “significantly thwarted” if financial services firms could insist on proceedings being defended by individual investors and not AFCA, in accordance with the Hardiman principle. [12]. Further, the application of that principle would mean that if a financial services entity received an adverse determination from AFCA, it could “take its chances in trying to reverse that result in the Supreme Court without risking an adverse costs order”, even if it had poor prospects of success. [13].

As between the plaintiff and AFCA, Dalton J considered that, given its substantial success, AFCA “ought to have 90% of its costs in the proceeding”. [23].

Whether the second defendant should be awarded its costs

Following the trial of the consolidated proceeding, the second defendant was also successful in its counter-claim against the plaintiff (to enforce the relevant AFCA determination). [28]. Nonetheless, the plaintiff resisted an order that it pay the second defendant’s costs. It argued that the second defendant’s interests “were the same, or sufficiently the same, as AFCA’s interests”, and so should have “been content with AFCA running the proceeding, rather than incurring a separate set of costs”. [35].

Her Honour noted that, in Statham v Shephard (No 2) (1974) 23 FLR 244, Woodward J held that a “court will not normally allow two sets of costs to defendants where there is no possible conflict of interest between them in the presentation of their case”. [35]. Justice Woodward had noted several exceptions to this general principle, including where the circumstances are such that the relationship between the defendants “might be such that they would be acting reasonably in remaining at arm’s length during the general course of litigation”. [35].

The second defendant sought to rely on that exception to Statham, contending that its interests were different to AFCA's, but Dalton J considered that there was "almost no factual basis for this submission". [36]. Her Honour said she didn't see how the second defendant's interests "could conflict with AFCA's", nor why it would "reasonably or properly, wish to remain at arm's length" from AFCA. [37]. Instead, her Honour considered that it would have been appropriate for the second defendant merely to "conduct a watching brief" to ensure that AFCA's conduct of the proceeding was reasonable and could ensure separate representation only if needed. As it turned out, AFCA's case was "conducted efficiently and well", and "[n]othing significant" was advanced at the trial on behalf of the second defendant. [37].

Accordingly, her Honour concluded that, despite its success, the second defendant should not receive its costs of the proceedings following consolidation. [38].

CONTRACTS – CONSTRUCTION AND INTERPRETATION OF CONTRACTS – WHERE THERE WAS AN ENTIRE AGREEMENT CLAUSE IN A LEASE – WHETHER EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE OF NEGOTIATIONS WAS ADMISSIBLE TO CONSTRUE THE LEASE – WHETHER THE LANDLORD WAS ENTITLED TO ENTER A NEW LEASE WITH AN EXISTING TENANT – WHETHER THE LEASE SHOULD BE RECTIFIED

Ha Tinh Pty Ltd v Chin Yin Pty Ltd [\[2022\] QSC 282](#) ★

This case concerned the proper construction of a lease for a retail shopping premises. The landlord had entered into a contract to lease the premises to the applicant, but now wished to offer a new lease of the premises to the existing tenant instead. The key issue was whether this was precluded by a clause requiring the landlord to use its "best endeavours" to obtain vacant possession. Justice Wilson held that it was. Her Honour also declined to rectify the contract, as sought by the landlord.

Wilson J

Background

The respondent is the owner and landlord of a retail shop in the Inala Plaza Shopping Centre. [1]. In February 2021 it entered into a contract with the applicant to lease those premises. However, the respondent now wishes to enter into a new lease with the existing tenant, The Reject Shop. [1]. Previously, the applicant obtained an interim/interlocutory injunction restraining the respondent from entering into that new lease. [9]. The applicant now seeks to make that injunction permanent, and to obtain declarations which include that the respondent must use its best endeavours to provide it with vacant possession of the property. [11].

There were two main issues in dispute: first, the proper construction of the lease (particularly a clause requiring the respondent to use its best endeavours to provide the applicant with vacant possession); and second, whether the lease should be rectified to "reflect the true intention of the parties" (as sought and alleged by the respondent). [18].

In the result, the applicant was successful, with Wilson J indicating she would likely make orders and declarations consistent with those it had sought. [153].

The construction of the lease

The lease between the parties contains a clause which relevantly provides that (clause 30(a)):

“The landlord must use their best endeavours to obtain vacant possession of the Premises by the Sunset Date or any extended Sunset Date ...”

Despite this, the respondent contended that the lease did not preclude it from entering into a new lease with the existing tenant. [13]. To support this submission, the respondent placed “significant weight” upon the fact that, during the course of negotiating the lease, it had explicitly rejected the inclusion of a clause sought by the applicant, namely that:

“The Landlord must not extend the expiry date of the existing tenant’s lease and must inform the Tenant of any anticipated delays within a reasonable time of being aware of such delay.” [“The rejected clause”.]

The rejected clause never made it into the final lease. The respondent suggests that, if this context is taken into account, it is evident that the parties never intended the lease to preclude it from entering into a new lease with the existing tenant.

However, Wilson J rejected this submission. Her Honour noted that the lease contained an entire agreement clause, which had the effect that the parties had promised each other that the lease “embodies the entire understanding of the parties and constitutes the entire terms agreed on between them in relation to the subject matter” (citing Coast Corp Pacific Pty Ltd v Stockland Development Pty Ltd [2018] QSC 305). [47]. In that context, the extrinsic evidence of the negotiations (including as to the rejected clause) was admissible only to “understand the background to this contract, but not as an aid to its interpretation”. [73]. Further, it would be “necessary to identify ambiguity in the lease before consideration can be given to such evidence”. [73]. In this case no relevant ambiguity existed; it was clear that, under the lease, “the respondent must use its best endeavours to obtain vacant possession”. [81].

As to the meaning of the “best endeavours” obligation in clause 30 of the lease, her Honour quoted case authority to the effect that this is to be “understood as an obligation to do all that reasonably can be done in the circumstances to achieve the contractual obligation” and would be measured by what was reasonable in the circumstances (Altis PropCo2 Pty Ltd v Majors Bay Development Pty Ltd [2022] NSWSC 403). [84]. It was clear that, in the circumstances of this case, the respondent pursuing a new lease with the existing tenant was “not consistent with its obligation to use their best endeavours to obtain vacant possession”. [111].

Whether the lease should be rectified

The respondent contended by counterclaim that the lease should be rectified “so as to reflect the intention of the parties” – to the effect that it was permitted to enter into a new lease with the existing tenant. [13].

Wilson J noted that the remedy of rectification is “designed to relieve against the mistaken expression of the true agreement between the parties”. [122]. The respondent submitted that the extrinsic evidence supported that being the case. [128]. However, Wilson J rejected that submission, finding that “[i]n all of the circumstances, there was no mistaken expression of the true intention of the parties”. [129]. Her Honour found that the evidence of the owner and manager of the applicant, as to the applicant’s intention when entering into the contract (which was inconsistent with the respondent’s allegations), was credible and “supported by the relatively contemporaneous advice given to them by their solicitor”. [151].

WHETHER A PURPORTED ADJUDICATION DECISION RELATING TO PAYMENT CLAIMS WAS MADE OUT OF TIME – WHETHER DECISION VOID FOR JURISDICTIONAL ERROR

Karam Group Pty Ltd as Trustee for Karam (No. 1) Family Trust v HCA Queensland Pty Ltd* [2022] QSC 290 ★

This case was about the proper construction of s 85(1), s 86 and s 88 Building Industry Fairness (Security of Payment) Act 2017 which relate to the time for deciding an adjudication application and set out the requirements for, and matters to be taken into account in, an adjudicator's decision. The issue in dispute was whether the adjudicator had decided the adjudication application within time. His Honour held that the adjudicator failed to do so and thus the adjudication decision was void.

16 December 2022

The applicant had entered a construction contract with the first respondent for the construction of a residential building. The first respondent served a payment claim in the amount of $7,838,688.92 and thereafter the applicant issued a payment schedule in the amount $1,554,407.04. Subsequently the first respondent lodged an adjudication application. The applicant challenged the validity of the adjudicator's decision which was purportedly made under the Building Industry Fairness (Security of Payment) Act 2017.

The primary basis of the challenge was that the decision had not been made within the prescribed time and was void for jurisdictional error [8]. Briefly ([4]-[5]):

1. Pursuant to s 86 of the Act, and following various extensions, the final date for the adjudicator to decide the application was 25 August 2022;
2. On that date, the adjudicator finalised the decision. However, it was not provided to the parties until 26 August 2022. That was because on 26 August 2022 the adjudicator communicated his unwillingness to "release" the decision to the parties until his fees and outlays were paid. That then occurred on the same day. Subsequently at 4:07 pm on 26 August 2022 the parties received the decision via email.
3. On 30 August 2022 the decision was amended under the "slip rule" in s 89 of the Act and the amended decision was provided to the parties.

The statutory scheme

Section 85 of the Act states as follows:

"85 Time for deciding adjudication application

- (1) Subject to section 86, an adjudicator must decide an adjudication application no later than—
 - (a) for a standard payment claim—10 business days after the response date; or
 - (b) for a complex payment claim—15 business days after the response date.

Section 86 provides a mechanism for extending time for deciding an adjudication application.

Section 88 of the BIF Act states, in part:

"88 Adjudicator's decision

- (1) An adjudicator is to decide—
 - (a) the amount of the progress payment, if any, to be paid by the respondent to the claimant (the adjudicated amount); and
 - (b) the date on which any amount became or becomes payable; and

- (c) the rate of interest payable on any amount.

- (5) The adjudicator's decision must—

- (a) be in writing; and
- (b) include the reasons for the decision, unless the claimant and the respondent have both asked the adjudicator not to include the reasons in the decision.

- (6) The adjudicator must give the registrar—

- (a) a copy of the decision; and
- (b) notice of all fees and expenses paid, and to be paid, to the adjudicator for the decision.

Maximum penalty—40 penalty units.

- (7) The adjudicator must give the registrar the information mentioned in subsection (6) at the same time the adjudicator gives a copy of the decision to the claimant and the respondent.”

Construction of the statutory scheme and application to the dispute

In construing the statute, his Honour noted the following matters:

1. The concept that the adjudicator's task of “deciding” the adjudication application is the completion of all aspects contained in s 88 within the time prescribed in s 85(1) (as extended by s 86) is in keeping with the Act's purpose; [48]
2. The desirability of compliance with the prescribed time limits is underpinned by the Act creating offences in instances of non-compliance with key obligations. [49].

He held that the proper construction of s 85(1), s 86 and s 88 is that the adjudicator decides the adjudication application by attending to all aspects specified in s 88 within the time period in s 85(1) (as extended pursuant to s 86), save for where the adjudicator has elected to refuse to communicate their decision where outstanding fees and expenses remain unpaid. [78]. As a result, an adjudicator will not be taken to have decided an application within time where he/she has finalised a written document complying with ss 88(1) and 88(5) before the expiry of the time period (in the current matter midnight on 25 August 2022), but has neglected to give a copy of the adjudicator's decision to the registrar (s 88(6)) and the parties (s 88(7)) before the expiry of the time period and has not exercised the right to refuse to communicate the decision until payment of their fees and expenses by giving notice before the expiry of the time period (s 95(7)(d)). [79].

Since the adjudicator did not provide a copy of the decision prior to midnight on 25 August 2022 or for that matter exercise the right under s 95(7)(d), the adjudication decision was void (see Civil Contractors (Aust) Pty Ltd v Galaxy Developments Pty Ltd (2021) 7 QR 34; [2021] QCA 10. [80], [81].

Did any obligation to repay the money paid pursuant to the void adjudication decision arise?

Amounts of money paid pursuant to an adjudicator's decision are subject to “practical compulsion”: see John Holland Pty Ltd v Chidambara [2017] WASC 179. Citing BM Alliance Coal Operations Pty Ltd v BGC Contracting Pty Ltd [2015] 1 Qd R 228; [2013] QCA 394, where the court held that when an adjudication decision is void, since no entitlement to payment of the adjudication amount arose, a principal has a right to recover the sum [83], [95], the applicant argued that it was in order that the amount paid pursuant to the purported adjudicator's decision be repaid. The first respondent disagreed.

His Honour was compelled to follow the decision as it was binding authority. [96]. Noting the similarity between the payment of money pursuant to an adjudicator's decision subsequently found to be invalid and the payment of money pursuant to a court order later overturned, [115] his Honour held that the first respondent was obliged to repay the money which had been paid by the applicant, with interest. [117], [122].

Disposition

Pursuant to s 10 Civil Proceedings Act 2011 the court ordered that the adjudication decision was void and set aside and it was further ordered that the first respondent pay to the applicant the sum of $1,821,891.26 that being the amount determined as due and payable pursuant to the decision, plus interest in the amount of $35,213.09.

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS – ACCRUAL OF CAUSE OF ACTION AND WHEN TIME BEGINS TO RUN – WHERE CONTRACT TO CARRY OUT AND COMPLETE WORKS – WHETHER CAUSE OF ACTION ACCRUES AT THE TIME OF BREACH OR AS AT THE ACTUAL OR PURPORTED COMPLETION DATE

Cape Byron Power 1 Pty Ltd v Downer Energy Systems Pty Ltd* [2022] QSC 294 ★

The matter concerned, primarily, a claim for breach of contract. The contract was for the defendants to carrying out works and complete a co-generation plant that included a furnace and boiler. When carrying out the works, the defendants installed a specific part incorrectly in the boiler. This eventually led to the boiler being damaged. The defendants argued that the claim for breach of contract was statute-barred because the part had been installed more than six years prior to the commencement of proceedings. His Honour, Justice Applegarth, rejected that defence because the contract was for the carrying out and completion of works. His Honour held that breach of contract action was not statute-barred because the cause of action for failing to complete the works in accordance with the contract arose as at the date of purported or actual completion, which date was less than six years prior to the date of commencement of proceedings.

Applegarth J

22 December 2022

Background

The plaintiffs engaged the first and second defendants to design, engineer, procure, construct, test and commission a co-generation plant, part of which involved the construction and optimisation of a boiler used in the plant. [19]. At the time of installation of the boiler, a particular component was installed incorrectly, such that the component (a damper) operated in reverse. The court found that the incorrect installation of the damper lead to overheating, which in July 2010 caused significant damage to the boiler. [42].

The plaintiffs sued the first and second defendant (“the defendants”) for (amongst other things) a breach of contract. The defendants pleaded a limitation defence that the claim for breach of contract was statute-barred because the relevant part had been incorrectly installed prior to completion of the contract and the cause of action arose as at the time of that breach. [697]. The plaintiffs contended that “this was an entire contract to complete work, and that the limitation period runs from the date of practical completion” and not from when the relevant part was installed. [698].

Relevant to the limitation issue was the question of characterising the relevant contractual obligations. [699]. The authorities identify a distinction between an obligation to simply carry out works and an obligation to “carry out and complete” works. [699]. Relevantly, if the obligation is to “carry out and complete” works, then if the works are not completed in accordance with the conditions in the contract, it is at the completion date that there is a breach of duty. His Honour found, through an examination of several clauses within the contract between the parties, that the defendants had an obligation to “carry out and complete works”. [702] – [708]. As Justice O’Farrell stated in Swansea Stadium Management Company Ltd v City & County of Swansea [2018] EWHC 2192, [57]:

“Where ... there is an obligation to carry out and complete the works, the cause of action for a failure to complete the works in accordance with the contract accrues at the date of practical completion ...”

Further, Justice Applegarth stated at [716] that:

“[the] authorities ... recognise the possibility that a breach of an obligation to ‘carry out and complete’ work may occur earlier than the date of practical completion ... They also recognise that the completion and delivery of works in a defective state ... may constitute a breach of the obligation to ‘complete’ the work in accordance with the contract, and that such a breach accrues on the date of completion or purported completion.”

His Honour found that in this case, a breach of the specific obligation to “execute and complete the Work under the Contract, so that the works when completed, were fit for their stated purpose” occurred on the date of completion. As the breach of the relevant obligations occurred on the date of completion or purported completion (being 21 November 2008) the proceedings for breach of contract were brought within time as they were commenced on 20 November 2014. Consequently, the claim for breach of contract was brought within time. [719].
